Dear Grandma,

Finally I got some spare time during this busy holiday, so I decided to write you a letter. As you already know, I'm in Rome as a camera operator with a friend of mine for a class project. But during this project we also have time for the sights of Rome.

The expo we visited (called Zeroemission Rome) was very interesting and exciting. It was about alternative energy sources such as windmills and solar energy. I know you are not interested in technology so I won't bore you with details.

We had only two days left for the city after we finished our task. For a city like Rome even two weeks would not be enough to see everything. But we tried to visit as many places as we could. The first thing that came to our mind was the Colosseum. It's probably the most famous landmark in Rome. Despite the fact that this building is almost two thousand years old, it's still a compelling sight.

Unfortunately we could not get to the Vatican because we arrived there late in the afternoon and the queue of people who wanted to get in was too long to enter in time. But we could see the Swiss Guards from the distance. Frankly speaking, they looked like clowns in their colorful uniforms with their foolishly old fashioned weapons. We took quite a lot of pictures of everything especially St. Peter's Square.

I'm looking forward to meeting you and showing you all the pictures we have taken. I'll tell you everything about this fantastic trip.

Love

Ken
